

AI effects

One thing is clear: teachers are not OK.

They describe trying to grade “hybrid essays half written by students and half written by robots,” trying to teach Spanish to kids who don’t know the meaning of the words they’re trying to teach them in English, and students who use AI in the middle of conversation. They describe spending hours grading papers that took their students seconds to generate: “I’ve been thinking more and more about how much time I am almost certainly spending grading and writing feedback for papers that were not even written by the student,” one teacher told me. “That sure feels like bullshit.”

(404 media)

Date: 2025-06-02
Words: 7
Time to read: 1 min

Newer

Older

7 Jun 2025

Worrying

2 Jun 2025

On your phone

Russell © 2022-2025

Tags Archive RSS feed

Made with Montaigne and bigmission 