

Happy was their second choice

banging hookers.

Grant Cardone, a former motivational speaker, told me that he gave it up when he finally faced the truth: he'd been a fraud. "The most successful people not only don't need motivation, they don't want it," he said. "They want aspiration." Cardone now runs the well-known 10X Growth Conference, whose promotional materials showcase his Gulfstream jet and his Rolls-Royce. "That whole thing of 'I own nothing but I'm happy'—that's one thousand per cent because those people couldn't make the money," he said. "Happy was their second choice."
