

Robby Hoffman

MY FATHER ALWAYS WANTED a Porsche. And after he and my mother split, he got one. Instead of paying child support, he decided to buy a used Porsche for about $10,000. We were living on welfare, and he was also living in squalor, but he sent us a picture of it, as if he was trying to get my mother and his family back [Hoffman is the seventh of 10 children]. I grew up knowing that Porsche is the best, and the 911 was my grail car, black with a tan interior. Recently I traded up and got one for $10,000. I don't have a relationship with my father – he was religious and he was absent and, yes, he was an asshole – but he was really funny, and I'm still half of him. When I look into the rear-view mirror, I see his eyes in my eyes. It helps me have a relationship with him, enjoying something he enjoys. It's not ideal, but it's not nothing.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL INCONVENIENCE in my life is old cars. When you're buying old things, you have to enjoy a tinkering type of lifestyle, even if it's frustrating. I'm on my third old car now – I like the clickety nature of them, and I don't freak out at everything that goes wrong. My first old car was a 1983 Toyota Corolla, very hard to get parts for, so I was on eBay, I was doing YouTube, but learning a lot throughout. You can get a newer Toyota for $3,000. But it looked and felt amazing.

MY STYLE ICON is Lewis Hamilton. I love anybody who pursues something specific to the highest degree. I find that he's been extremely himself in a very old-guard type of industry. People didn't want him there, but he's there and he looks good as hell doing it. People like that, who push fashion, who have fun with things now that they can, I love that. Fashion-wise, I love A$AP Rocky. He wears whatever he wants. And I like Eminem, too. Eminem dresses however the fuck he wants to dress.
